

Echokey Mystory Workshop

MMLA 2025 • A Gentle Introduction to Creative AI

What This Workshop Is About

This workshop offers a simple, friendly way to experiment with generative AI for writing. You do NOT need technical knowledge or experience with AI. We focus on creativity, memory, and personal voice—things English scholars already know well.

What We'll Do

- Think about small moments, images, or memories that matter to you.
- Build a short “echokey”: a small set of words or phrases that reflect your style or interests.
- Use that echokey to guide an AI model so it creates writing that sounds more personal and meaningful.
- Try a few easy activities you can adapt for your own classes.

Why This Matters

Generative AI is showing up everywhere—especially in writing. This workshop gives you a way to approach AI that centers your own voice rather than replacing it. The goal is to help you feel comfortable, curious, and in control when working with these tools.

What You'll Leave With

- A simple, repeatable method for using AI in creative or reflective writing
- Classroom-ready ideas you can try with students
- A better sense of how AI shapes writing, invention, and imagination

Access All Workshop Materials

Everything for this session—slides, examples, and activities—can be found at:
<http://linktr.ee/echokey>

Full method and examples:

<https://harmonykeyhum.github.io/echokey-mystory-workshop/>